When I was a child, it was Christmas Day that I impatiently tried to push time toward. Now that I'm an adult, I'm in no rush. There is such a wonderful spirit during the Christmas Season that disappears so quickly after the holiday is past. I took it for granted as a child, but as an adult, I know how precious it is. I savor each minute of it. I am so grateful that there is a Christmas, and I wish you the happiest.
